Claims 12 and 15 are withdrawn from further consideration pursuant to 37 CFR 1.142(b) as being drawn to a nonelected species, there being no allowable generic or linking claim. Election was made without traverse in the reply filed on 2/21/07.

The applicant obviously recognized that Figure 2 and 3 represented distinct embodiments from those of Figures 4 and 5 and the examiner believes that the embodiment of Figures 2 and 3 was elected in applicant's response. As noted by the applicant, claim 12 does not read on the elected embodiment nor does Claim 15. Thus, these claims have been withdrawn from consideration.

Claims 9-11, 13-14 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

In particular, in Claim 9 the phrase "moving in respect to the body part" has no clear meaning and in Claim 10 the word "its" lacks a clear antecedent.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 9 and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Harndorf in view of Aldinger.

Harndorf, at Figure 2, teaches a common rail fuel system that uses a throttle device (19) in the line from the common rail to the injector. The throttle device is obviously designed to slow the flow to the injector needle when there is a pressure surge created by the opening of the control valve (7).

Aldinger teaches using a throttle valve on the output from an injection pump and upstream of the injection needle valve. The throttle is designed to decrease the amount of fuel reaching the needle at the beginning of the pumping stroke and this is accomplished by increasing the throttle opening as the piston moves toward the downstream side of the pump passage.

It would have been obvious to modify the throttle of Harndorf by using the valve of Aldinger for the throttle since the pulse created by the opening of the Harndorf control valve would have been similar to the pulse created by the closing of the Aldinger relief valve and the beginning of the high-pressure stroke. Both events would have created the same problem and this problem had already been recognized and solved by Aldinger.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
